

Our Story

Mapleline Farm is a family owned and operated farm, started as a vegetable farm in 1904. In 1980, John Kokoski, the fourth generation took over the reins of the farm from his father and started establishing his registered Jersey herd. By 1995, they began getting their milk bottled off site and establishing a wholesale and distribution business. Almost 10 years later, a plant was built at the farm as well as a barn expansion to accommodate the growing demand.

Today, Mapleline Farm's milk can be found throughout Massachusetts and is owned and operated by John's daughters, Jessica and Jennifer. The herd has been recognized nationally for type and production and we are active members of the American Jersey Cattle Association and local farm associations. Although the farm has been experiencing growth over the past 20 years, we still remain committed to producing and maintaining a healthy Jersey herd, preserving the farm land for our future generations through the APR Program and land conservation practices and building a sustainable business model
